11 Businesses You Can Start in Your Pajamas

For the above entrepreneurs, wearing pajamas for a day at the office isn't far from reality. From pet care to virtual assistants and even online dating, we found entrepreneurs who are not just enjoying work from their living rooms and bedrooms, but they are also making a good living at it. In one case, a business owner grossed $10 million in a year, and cleared half that amount. Here's a look at the hottest industries for home-based entrepreneurs -- illustrated with some fun CEO self-portraits.

Accounting Services -- Melissa Nash Andrews, Accounts Receivables

In a tight economy, one of the primary goals for a business owner is staying on top of cash flow. But let's face it -- nobody likes having to ask for the check. That's where Melissa Nash Andrews and her company, Accounts Receivables, come in. A full-service collection agency, Nash Andrews stays on top of her clients' accounts receivables and provides a range of bookkeeping services for business owners looking to outsource accounting. "If I can help another small business person to stay in business and to keep their business, then I've met my goal," she says.
